LaGrange College

Opening

All aspects of life are like a giant puzzle which can be broken down into tiny parts or pieces. The way a person decides to put the pieces together determines his destiny.

College life is one aspect, or piece of a person's history. And college life itself is made up of a variety of experiences.

Which pieces of college life a student chooses to emphasize, academics or social can make or break that student's college career. And which piece of the academia puzzle she chooses to concentrate on will have a major influence on the rest of her life.

Classes . . . friends . . . teachers, plays, musical presentations, socials, dances, organizations --- they all fit college life together, piece by piece.

College gets new leadership

The Rev. F. Stuart Gulley: 24th president of LaGrange College

On July 1, 1996, The Rev. F. Stuart Gulley assumed the helm of LaGrange College as its 24th president when Dr. Walter Y. Murphy retired after 16 years as president of college.

Gulley, 35, came to LaGrange from Emory University where he was the associate vice president for university development and church relations.

Charles Hudson Sr., who served as co-chair of the search committee for a new president, said Gulley is what LaGrange Colleges needs at this time.

"Walter Murphy has brought LaGrange College to a place where it is ready to take off, and Mr. Gulley's accomplishments in and commitment to church-related higher education make him the perfect person to take the College into the 21st century."

Getting to this position--this place in his life--has been the result of Gulley's putting together a number of pieces of his life's puzzle: education, goals and commitment.

He comes from a family deeply steeped in the church and higher education. He is the son of a father who is a United Methodist minister and professor church history at Vanderbilt University.

Gulley graduated with honors from Vanderbilt in 1983 with a bachelor of arts degree in modern European history.

Three years later he earned the master of divinity degree, also with honors, from the Candler School of Theology at Emory University. He was ordained a United Methodist minister in 1990.

Upon graduation from Emory in 1986, Gulley became director of admissions and student placement at Candler School of Theology, where he increased student admissions by 33 percent in a three-year period. In 1995 he was promoted to the position he held before coming to LaGrange. In that role he was responsible for the development programs of Emory's School of Business, Law Oxford College, Theology and the Carlos Museum.

His wife, Kathleen Crenshaw Gulley, also earned a master of divinity degree from Emory and was an elementary school teacher in DeKalb County for six years. They have one son, 1-year-old Andrew Baker Gulley.

"LaGrange College is a remarkable institution," Gulley said. "The caliber of the faculty, the quality of the student body, the excellent health of the school's finances and physical plant and the tremendous love that graduates and trustees have for this institution make LaGrange a treasure among higher education institutions today."

President Gulley greets the Rev. Jim Ellison, a college alumni, who traveled to LaGrange to join in the Homecoming festivities.

Grand Marshall for the Homecoming Parade, President Gulley is joined by his wife, Kathleen, and son, Andrew.

Lamar Dodd...

His life and art

When Lamar Dodd died Sept. 20, 1996 at the age 87, a retrospective of his work was on exhibit at the art center which bears his name.

"A Shared Vision: The Life and Art of Lamar Dodd" opened with a reception July 17. The artist himself attended the reception which was held on the night the Olympic torch passed through LaGrange.

"I'm so deeply honored that they are having the exhibit. It's like looking at my life history," Dodd said.

The opening festivities of the retrospective art exhibit, held jointly by the Lamar Dodd Art Center and the Chattahoochee Valley Art Museum, included a premier performance of an original chamber music composition by LaGrange College Callaway Professor of Music and Music Department chair Lee Johnson. The piece, Johnson said,

"I'm so deeply honored that they are having the exhibit. It's like looking at my life history."

was inspired by Dodd's life.

At the reception, a sculpture created by artist Jack Kehoe was dedicated in Dodd's honor.

The exhibit was the first time in 30 years, since Atlanta's High Museum of Art held a retrospective, that so many of Dodd's works had been gathered in one place, John Lawrence, Dodd Art Center Director, said.

To display Dodd's art, six themes were selected. Those themes were "Continuity and Change: The Artist as Student," "The South: Homeplaces and People," "People as Landscape: Form and Personality," "Technology and Human Spirit," "Quiet Moments" and "The Elements."

Dodd studied architecture at Georgia Tech and also studied with the Art Students League of New York. He retired in 1976 as the chair of the fine arts division and head of the art department at the University of Georgia.

Dodd was survived by his wife, Annie Laurie, and his daughter, Irene Dodd of Valdosta.

Freshmen perspective

Incoming students: their thoughts on LaGrange College

Who: Nylsa Dunbar

Background: Long Island, New York

Major: Drama

Why did you choose LC?: My parents just relocated to Fayetteville in September. LaGrange College has an excellent theater program and the atmosphere is easy to adjust to. If I need help in any subject I know I can go to any of my teachers for one-on-one help. I didn't want to be a number at a large school. Being from New York, I am still not used to Southern hospitality.

What one thing would you change about LC?: No 8 a.m. classes.

What is your favorite thing about LC?: Not the food. It is not mama's cooking.

Who: Stuart Holden

Background: Thompson, Georgia

Major: Photography

Why did you choose LC?: I wanted a small school and LaGrange College was close to home. It just fit.

What one thing would you change about LC?: I'd definitely put in more parking. I can't tell you how many times I have been blocked in by someone who has parked illegally.

What is your favorite thing about LC?: My friends. It's easy to make friends and you always see your friends everywhere --like in the dining hall and on the patio.

making decisions for the future

Who: Jennifer Ives

Background: Marietta, Pope High School

Major: Undecided

Why did you choose LC?: A couple of my friends talked to me about coming here and when I took the tour my Hilltopper was very easy to talk to. I immediately felt at home. I never pictured going to a school where when you walk around the campus everybody knows your name and says hey. Even upperclassmen are there to help.

What one thing would you change about LC?: Some of the school food.

What would you tell a friend thinking about coming to LC?: The school has a lot to offer with friends, majors and sororities.

Who: Brad Markham

Background: Newnan, Newnan High School

Major: Biology

What would you tell a friend thinking about coming to

LC?: Since LaGrange College is such a small school, it's easy to make new friends. I made new friends really quickly. Classes are small and you get more of a chance to know your professors and talk to them if you are having a problem.

What one thing would you change about LC?: I'd like to get a better recycling program going. The only recycling bins now are at the end of the hall in the dorms.

Presidential Inauguration

LaGrange College celebrates for three days.

A community-wide picnic, bringing together faculty, staff and students, marked the beginning of the inauguration celebrations. Students and staff gave speeches telling the impact LaGrange College has had on their lives, enjoyed a hamburger supper and mingled with their new president.

Students enjoy the time to be together and celebrate LaGrange College's future. Professor Sam Hornsby tries on his inauguration baseball hat.

Students try out different methods of wearing their caps

As the sun set on the community-wide picnic, tapers were lit for a beautiful candlelight tour of the LaGrange College campus.

Hats Off! Inauguration baseball caps are thrown toward the sky in celebration of the inauguration of LaGrange College's 24th president.

Who: Barbie Everett

Background: Kennesaw, Georgia

Major: Theatre

What is your favorite memory of LC?: Working as a RA, working with the freshmen.

Why did you pick your major?: I started dancing when I was 3 years old. I've always been on stage. In middle school, I was in some performances and knew that is what I wanted to do as a career.

What do you hope to do with your degree?: I'm hoping to work in New Hampshire as a stage manager or box office manager. Then I would like to move to Orlando and work for Disney.

Who: Angela Underdown

Background: St. Augustine, Florida

Major: Psychology

Why did you choose LC?: I wanted a small school. I don't regret coming here. I feel prepared. I feel like I have the basics I need.

Why did you pick your major?: Psychology is a subject I have always been interested in. I've always been willing to get books outside the class no matter who was teaching. I've always wanted to understand myself, too.

What do you hope to do with your degree?: I will go to graduate school and major in counseling. I hope to someday get my doctorate and work as a private counselor.

making decisions for the future

Who: Read Blumberg

Background: Marietta, Georgia

Major: Business Administration

What do you hope to do with your degree?: I hope to continue my employment with Coca-Cola. As a student, I have worked as the campus sales representative but I'd like to work out of the Atlanta offices when I graduate.

What are some of your favorite memories about LC?:

Winning the Waights Henry Student of the Year last year, being Student Government Association President and being named the best president of my fraternity out of the southern division.

What would you change, if you could, about the past four years?: I'd concentrate more on my grades.

Who: D.C. Knight

Background: Star, Mississippi

Major: English

Why did you choose LC?: I read about it in a magazine one fall afternoon when I was a junior in high school. The next summer I came for a visit and absolutely fell in love with LaGrange. It is so pretty. The minute I stepped on campus I just knew I was in the right place.

Why did you choose your major?: My first major was theater. Then I took some classes with Dr. Mallory and Dr. Hornsby and fell in love with English. I have never regretted the change or my decision to come to LaGrange College.

What are your plans for the future?: My interest is journalism and I would like to travel. I have applied for the Peace Corps.

Campus Diversity

LaGrange College's International Student Organization celebrated the diversity of the campus during International Week April 1 - 5.

The local community was invited to attend activities such as a Food Sampling From Around the World. Samples of ikra po-russki from Russia, mole poblano from Mexico, rice balls and mochi from Japan, pollo con verduras from Equatorial Guinea, leche plan or adobo from the Phillippines, peanut butter stew from Gambia, legume buf rice from Chad and curry beef or dumplings from Taiwan were available for tasting.

"We feel that in our diverse cultures lies our dignity, which has become our motto for our organization and for International Week at LaGrange College," said Stephen Lugor from Sudan. "We hope to develop a bond among all cultures and show Americans the life that exists beyond the United States."

Some of the international students wore their native dress at the food tasting. Exhibitions of the different countries represented by the students were on display.

On April 2 an international basketball game was held and Thursday a worship service was held in the College Chapel lead by Lugor and Masao Inamura from Japan.

The week's finale was a quiz contest held Saturday in the Alumni Ballroom of Callway Student Center followed by an international party.

About 55 students representing 35 foreign countries comprise LaGrange College's international student population.

International students enjoy a dinner at President Gulley's home.

Meetings always prove to be enjoyable times of socializing and exchanging cultures.

Stephen Ligor tries to get the group to laugh during a lunch on the quad as part of the Wellness Fair.

Smaller Pieces....

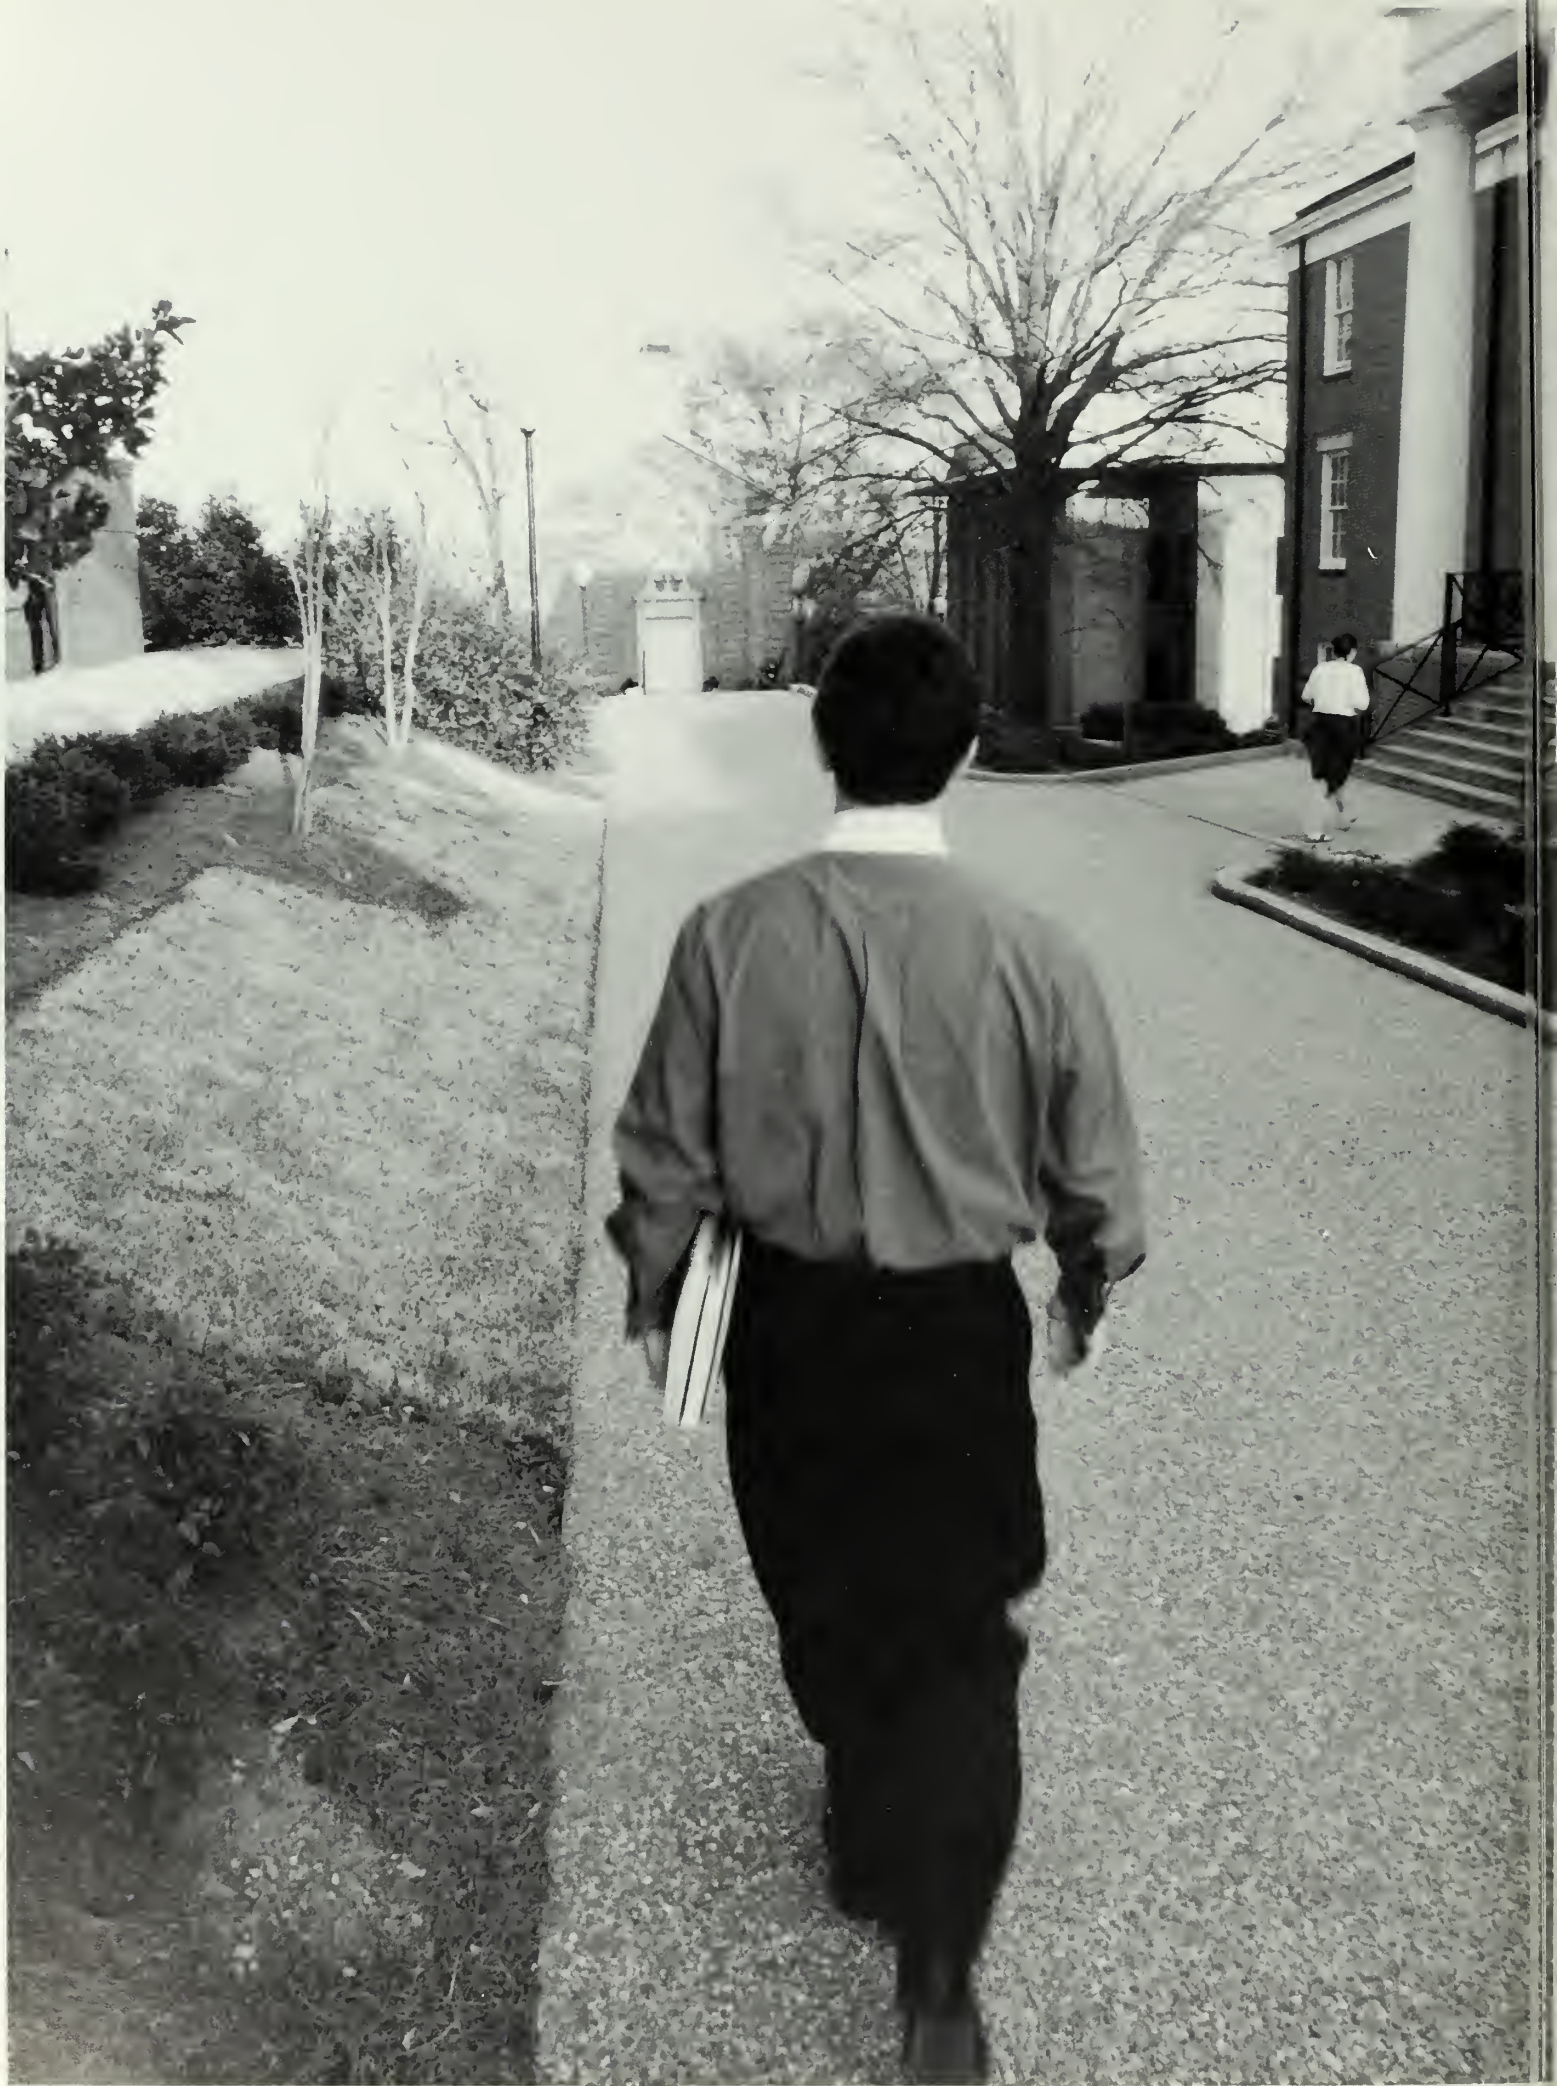

More little things that make college life unique

As another year of classes ends, students move up one more level. Freshmen become sophomores, sophomores become juniors, juniors become seniors and seniors graduate into “the real world.”

For a graduate, then, those four years of college along with all the years of high school, middle school, elementary school and even, sometimes, preschool, becomes another piece in the puzzle of the graduate’s life.

And for years to come, that piece will influence the greater puzzle. Employment will be based on decisions made in college and long-term friendships, even marriages, are sometimes begun from chance acquaintances on campus.

College ends, life-long careers begin. It all fits together ... piece by piece.
